more than 40 sick and wounded repatriated Chinese Communist prisoners of war were undergoing recuperative treatment at the Wuhsi (N 31-35, E 120-18) army rest center (7120/6511/0128/9502/2076).¹ Most of the patients at the center were natives of Shantung and Kiangsu. The patients were given a wide variety of entertainment, including movies and plays. Repatriated prisoners in good health were allowed to leave the rest center for short trips in the Wuhsi area, and patients' relatives were allowed to travel at government expense to the rest center to visit. The repatriated prisoners were to be given factory jobs after their discharge from the center.
